Family Voices ▶ Audio Project

Everybody has a story....and everybody's story matters. Often times we, as members of a larger community, learn the most through hearing the stories of others. We want to help record and share our local community stories of success and triumph, lessons learned, troubles and life experiences.

Share your story
as a podcast!

What is it all about?

The heart of the project is about people sharing stories that are important to them:

- a son asking a caregiver about their childhood,
- a father talking to his daughter about decisions she has made,
- an individual sharing their journey towards a healthier lifestyle,

- or a mentor asking a youth about their relationship.

When people listen to these stories, we want them to hear the strength and determination, humor, struggles, pride and celebrations of Western New York families.

What is this for?

Inspired by the national Story Corps project, Community Connections of NY is hoping to create a library of stories about the experiences of Western New York families. We hope these stories create an opportunity for discussion and learning, a moment of connection, and shared respect for other peoples experiences.

Tell us about your family and life...

If you choose to participate, the recording of your story will be available in podcast format on a website dedicated to Western New York families. If you wish to record a story without sharing your name, we can do that too.

How do I get involved?
